Connecting over the festive period

During December, a month when people often celebrate festivities with their family, friends, loved ones, and communities, we want to encourage our supporters and members to reach out to their neighbours and say 'hello!'.

For some, December's colder weather and longer nights can feel isolating - reaching out to say hello to your neighbour, especially if you know they live alone or are vulnerable, may make all the difference to them.

Staying connected with your community has mental health benefits too! Research shows* that when people are socially connected and have stable and supportive relationships, they are more likely to have better mental and physical health. Social connectedness can also help create trust and resilience within communities.

REACH OUT THIS DECEMBER

SAY HELLO!

This December, reach out to your neighbours and community. Maybe it's the offer of a cup of tea to an elderly neighbour, or taking in their parcels while they're out. Maybe it's supporting your local Neighbourhood Watch group to organise a Christmas fair on your street, or perhaps donating unwanted items to charity shops ahead of the present-buying rush! All of the little gestures, as well as the big efforts, make a difference in bringing our communities together, and making them safer places to live.

If you're concerned about a neighbour during the festive period, or you need some support for yourself, Samaritans are always available to lend a listening ear and talk with you. Click here to visit their website for more details.

Our Shop includes a wide range of exclusively branded items, including snazzy window stickers and road signage, branded mugs and lanyards, and crime prevention booklets.

Raising awareness of child exploitation in your area with #LookCloser

Not all young people will tell you when they are in trouble. And sometimes they won't know they are in danger, because they have been groomed to believe otherwise.

Exploitation often happens when individuals or groups develop friendships with young people, before taking advantage of their innocence to force them into criminal activity. From sexual abuse to forced labour, money laundering, and drug trafficking, young people across the UK are being exploited. It can happen on public transport, in shopping centres, car washes, public parks, or online, through social media and gaming platforms.

It is everyone's responsibility to safeguard our young people. For this reason, The Children's Society launched the #LookCloser campaign, which aims to help people spot and report the signs of child exploitation.

The signs

Although children react to trauma in very different ways, typical signs of exploitation include:

- Unaccompanied children visiting a house where only adults live
- Young people who appear anxious, frightened, angry, showing signs of neglect or displaying other behaviours/injuries that concern you
- Increased callers at a property
- Increased antisocial behaviour at a property
- Not seeing the resident for long periods of time
- Unfamiliar vehicles at the property

If you spot any of these signs, you have a duty to act. What should you do about it?

By raising awareness of the signs of exploitation, we can keep children and young people safe. If something doesn't feel right, it might not be. As a Neighbourhood Watch supporter, you and your neighbours are in a position to spot the signs and report them to the police on 101, or 999 in an emergency. If you are unsure, you can call the NSPCC for advice on 0808 800 5000. The #LookCloser campaign also has a range of resources that you can download. Use these to raise awareness and safeguard your community. Share the hashtag on social media and visit The Children's Society website for more information.

...Spotting online shopping scams this Christmas with Avast

As the Christmas countdown begins, we're all on the hunt for the perfect gifts for friends and family. The past years have seen shoppers shift from trekking down the High Street to endlessly scrolling through influencer-approved products on socials, looking for the perfect deal.

This year, cybersecurity experts at Avast have warned holiday shoppers to be wary of deals that seem too good to be true on social media. According to their research, over two-thirds of UK consumers who were scammed during the last festive season said it happened while making a purchase on a social media platform.

It's a troubling trend that's only expected to get worse. Last year, UK Finance estimated that criminals swiped up to £100 million across 200,000 payment fraud cases. And with data showing that TikTok alone generated £3 billion in global consumer spending in 2023, social media swindlers are becoming increasingly savvy to tap into the funds.

Over half of Brits are already concerned that their social feeds will be overrun with hard-to-spot scam ads this holiday season – and a troubling 40% say they've made Christmas purchases by clicking straight on those dubious-looking promotions.

Luckily, the team at Avast has some top tips to help shoppers stay safe:

- Think twice: Is the discount worth potentially sacrificing your digital identity?
- Shield your data: Use an alternative email address that is not your usual address that you use for your daily, personal life
- Double-Check Websites: Instead of blindly buying through a social media ad, visit the retailer's official website to make sure the deal is legit.
- Do your research: Check reviews and watch for red flags like suspicious payment methods
- Authenticate deals: Legitimate coupons do exist - try to find codes from the retailer directly and not third-party providers.
- Protect your information: Use antivirus protection such as Avast Free Antivirus to secure your device

This Christmas, a few extra minutes of caution could save you from becoming another fraud statistic. With Avast's tools and some smart shopping habits, you can celebrate with confidence, leaving the worries behind.

Homemade festive dog treat recipes from LockLatch

LOCKLATCH®

When it comes to best security measures and those vital early warnings, your furry friend is up there at the top of the list. Big or small, they have been keeping you safe all year round, alerting you to knocks at the door, things that go bump in the night, strangers that may do you harm, or simply - when things just don't seem right. So, isn't it time you returned the favour?

While we believe every day should be a celebration of your animals, we thought we would use this opportunity to share some easy and cost-effective ways to show your pup you care this festive season.

However, there are many brands of doggie treats on the market and it can be difficult to discern which ones are made from healthy ingredients or are suitable for your pup. That's why we've put together this list of organic dog treat recipes that you can make at home, so you can have more control over how you spoil your best friend...

Homemade peanut butter dog treat recipe

If there's one thing dogs love, it's peanut butter, and this clever recipe combines this old favourite ingredient with a bacon and peanut butter glaze. This recipe can be finished in less than an hour (including baking time!), and makes 30 (large) dog treats, so it's worth the labour. Always use Xylitol-free peanut butter in your dog treat recipes, Xylitol can be toxic to dogs. Get the recipe from Pinch of Yum here!

Vegetarian dog treats

Unless otherwise specified by your vet, dogs should have a balanced diet that gives them the protein, vitamins and minerals required to keep them healthy. These homemade vegetarian dog biscuits are a great way to give your pup the extra nutrients that may be missing from their store-bought pet food. Get the recipe here!

If you are making any dog treat recipes at home, it's important to remember that every dog is different. You should speak to your veterinarian about any allergies or dietary considerations your dog might have before giving them any sort of treat, whether it is store-bought or homemade.

NHS 111 stickers available in the NW Shop!

This winter, the NHS is encouraging people to get to the help they need by using NHS 111, and we want to remind you of the window stickers that are available to order from our shop now. This is part of our partnership with the NHS to encourage people to use 111 online or call 111 when they think they need medical help fast.

We are recommending that the sticker be affixed so that both sides of the sticker remain visible. Through this message being placed within homes, it will prompt residents to use NHS 111, either for themselves or a member of their community. NHS 111 helps assess and direct people to the most appropriate service for their medical needs.

The NHS 111 service is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week. You can call, go online or use the NHS App to get:

- the right healthcare in your area; or
- a call back from a nurse, doctor or paramedic; or advice on self-care.

People should call 111 to speak to someone if they need to:

- discuss complex medical problems;
- discuss worries about a long-term condition; or get medical advice for a child under five.
